Addressing discrimination at HAW Hamburg

AN OVERVIEW OF THE ANTI-DISCRIMINATION POLICY

We are committed to fighting discriminatory behaviour!

(HAW Hamburg Diversity Vision)

What is discrimination?

Less favourable treatment, harassment or violence based on actual or ascribed characteristics (grounds of discrimination)

Who does this policy apply to?

- University members (Section 2, University Statutes), e.g. students, administrative staff, professors, doctoral students
- Associate members (Section 3, University Statutes), e.g. honorary senators, guest professors, sessional instructors, tutors, auditing students
- Third parties (e.g. cleaning and security personnel, event attendees, Studierendenwerk Hamburg staff, cooperation partners), provided that at least one person from the groups listed above is involved

Where does this policy apply?

- On university campuses and in university buildings
- At university events (including external events)
- In written electronic communication
- In online rooms

Grounds of discrimination

Grounds of discrimination
(protected characteristics)
pursuant to the General Act on Equal Treatment (AGG)

Discrimination takes various forms.

Direct discrimination

A person is treated less favourably than another person in a comparable situation due to protected characteristics.

A job applicant is not invited to an interview because of her skin colour.

Indirect discrimination

Rules, regulations and accepted behaviours that apply to all people can have discriminatory impacts on certain groups in specific situations and contexts.

The mandatory staff meeting takes place in the afternoon. In order to attend, a single parent needs to find childcare for their daycare-age child.

Violence

Violence means physical/ psychological coercion that results from specific behaviour. Violence is intended to restrict the other person from freely developing and exercising their own will.

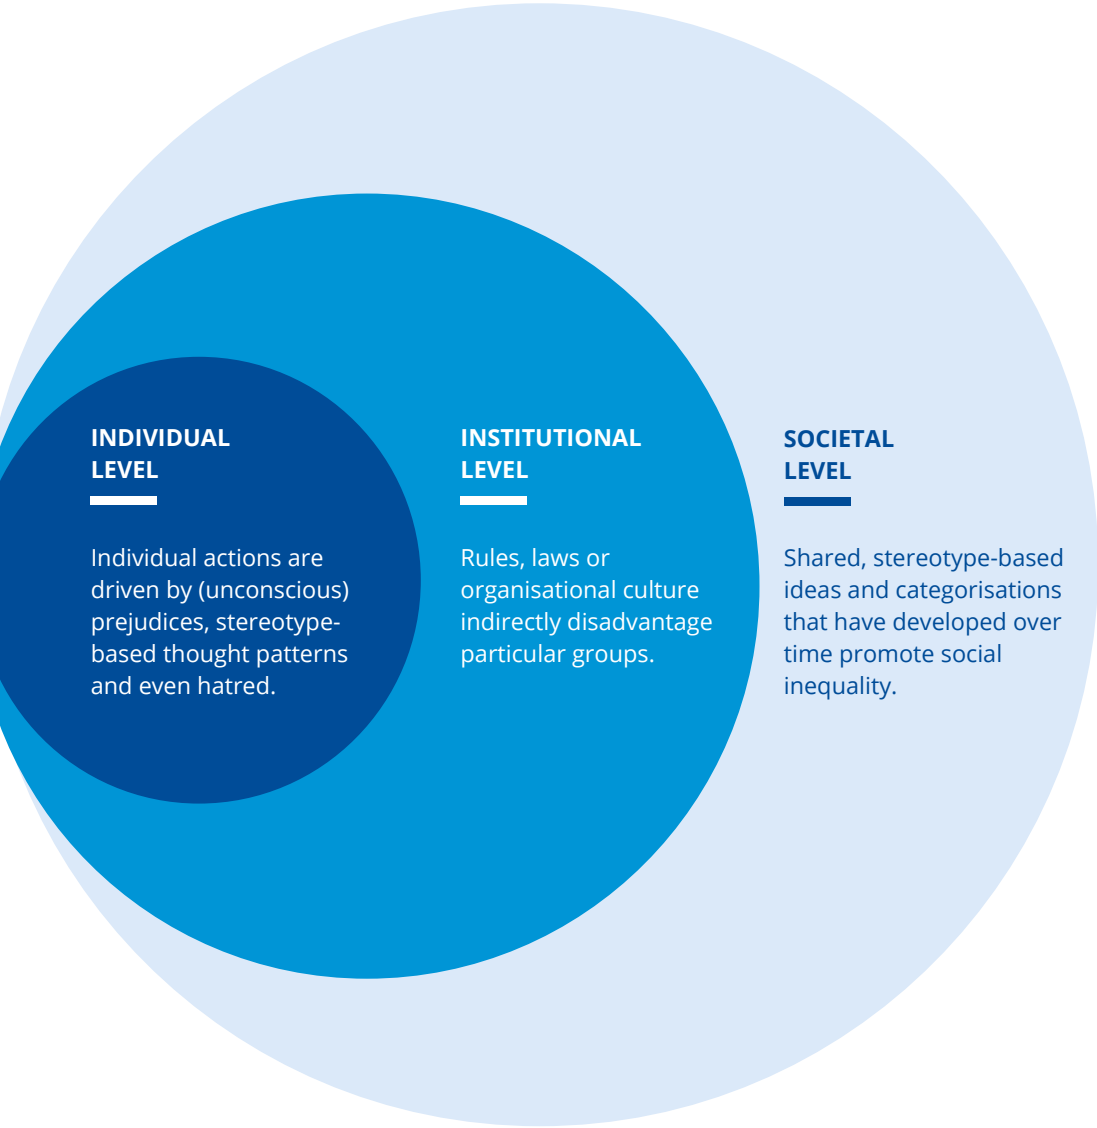

An overweight person is physically attacked and insulted because of their appearance.

Harassment

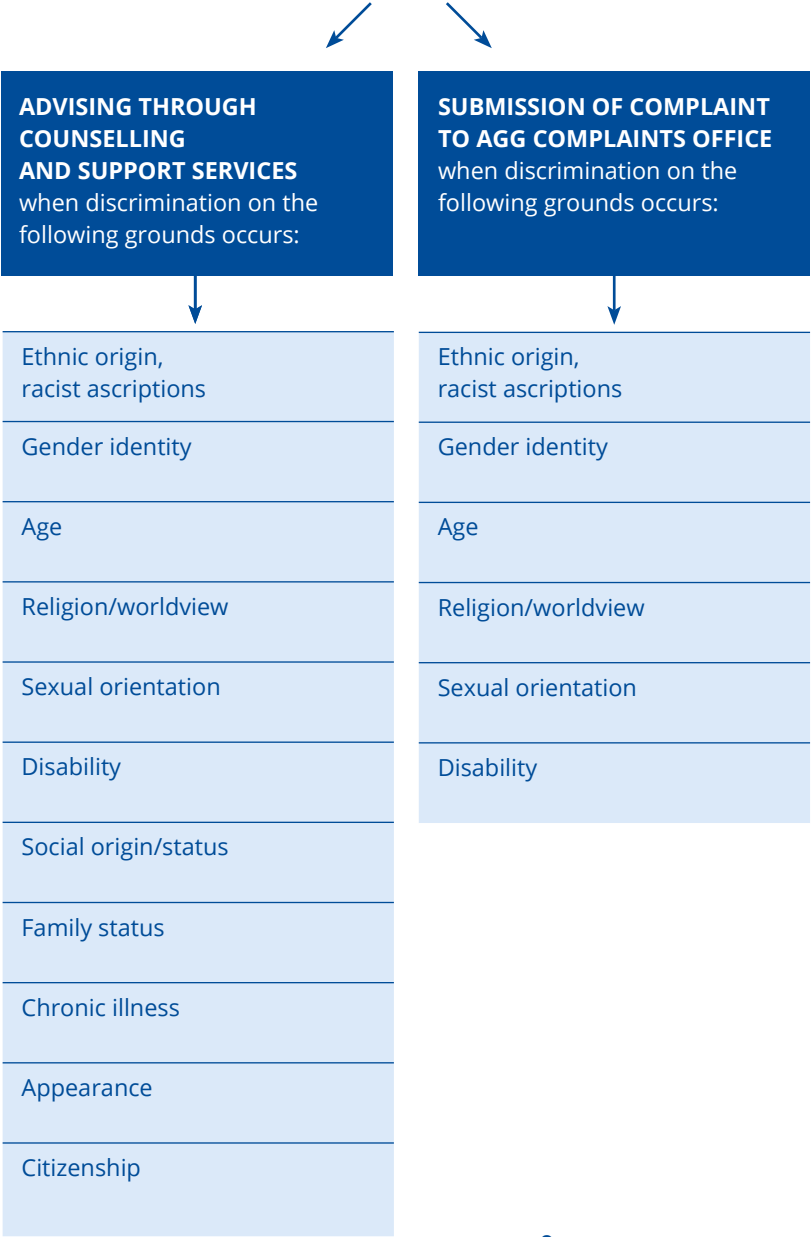

Harassment occurs when unwanted conduct has the purpose or effect of violating the dignity of the person impacted.

A staff member makes sexually suggestive remarks and tells obscene jokes to his female colleague.

All levels of discrimination are included in HAW Hamburg's discrimination ban.

In the event of discrimination,
the individual impacted has two options, depending on the ground of discrimination.

What do I do if I experience or observe discrimination?

All persons to whom this policy applies have the right to receive advice and support from the responsible university bodies (see pg. 12) if they experience, observe or are directed to carry out discrimination, harassment or violence.

These bodies are obligated to maintain confidentiality.

HAW Hamburg members and associate members can also turn to the university management, deans, department heads and their supervisors in the event of discrimination.

All persons to whom this policy applies have the right to submit a complaint to the university's AGG Complaints Office (see pg. 13) if they experience, observe or are directed to carry out discrimination, harassment or violence.

The AGG Complaints Office is obligated to maintain confidentiality.

SUBMITTING A COMPLAINT TO THE AGG COMPLAINTS OFFICE

How does the university respond in the event of discrimination?

In a concrete case of discrimination, protective and disciplinary measures shall be taken (e.g. by the head of the university administration, the dean, or the direct supervisor).

To determine these measures and sanctions, the severity of the offence, the harm to the person concerned, the willingness to make amends or improve, and the impact on the person disciplined shall be taken into account.

Measures

Minor measure	Formal meeting to address the incident (see Anti-Discrimination Policy, Section 6.1)
Severe measure	Pressing of criminal charges by the university
Additional measures for employees	E.g. reprimand or warning of disciplinary action
Additional measures for instructors	E.g. withdrawal of teaching contract
Additional measures for students	E.g. suspension from specific course sessions or an entire course

In the event of violations of the ban on discrimination, measures from the university's house rules can be imposed on all university members/ associate members and third parties.
